SHE WEPT AND SAID HE WAS HER DARLING BOY.

Mysterious and Probably Fatal Shooting Case in a West Twenty-eighth Street Flat Late Last Night.

"YOU HIT THE BULL'S-EYE THAT TIME."

Four Bullets Were Fired, a Man Is Very Serionsly Injured and a Well Dressed Woman Is Under Arrest.

POISON TAKEN FROM HER.

A mysterious shooting case occurred at No. 100 West Twenty-eighth street shortly after eleven o'clock last night.

A woman who, in the West Thirtieth street station house, gave her name as Ellen Nelson shot and severely injured a man who, she said, was John Smith.

The couple have been occupying the second floor of No. 100 for three months. Last night four pistol shots rang out in quick succession from the flat and Policeman Thompson, who heard them, dashed into the house. The woman was uninjured, but the man was lying on the floor with a pistol shot wound in his abdomen.

The woman held a .32 calibre revolver in her hand and was crying and wringing her hands. An ambulance was summoned from New York Hospital and the injured man was taken there. He was very severely injured.

The woman was taken in a cab to the station nouse, where she was carefully searched. A bottle of creosote was found in her pocket, and she claimed that the man was trying to take the creosote when she snatched the bottle out of his hand. Then, she said, he drew the revolver and in the struggle shot himself.

She denied at first that she had shot the man, but afterward acknowledged that she did so, saving that the shooting was accidental, but that it was done in the struggle for possession of the pistol. She refused to tell the name of the man, saying that she had promised him that in case anything should happen to him not to divulge his identity. Two women were called into the station house to search her, but beyond a sum of money nothing was found. "HER DABLING BOY."

After the search she broke down and cried, "Oh! if my darling boy should die what would become of me?" Then she said that if Captain Reilly would talk to her she would confess everything. She is about thirty years old, well dressed, stout and dark com-Her face was perfectly white and, until she broke down, set with determination not to tell anything. The policeman discovered the bottle of creosote just in time, as it was evidently her intention to attempt suicide. She cried when the bottle was taken from her, but said that she had taken it from the man who attempted to swallow the dose.

She stated to Captain Reilly that they had had a quarrel and that he followed her into the bedroom and fired two shots at her. Then she grasped the revolver, and two more shots were fired. He fell and then the police came in.

When the policeman asked the man who shot him he said, looking at the woman:- "You made a bull's-eye that time, didn't you?" The woman was looked up.

The real name of the man was ascertained to be Samuel Post, and the woman's name Mrs. Ellen Nelson. Nothing further about them could be as-

OBITUARY.

GENERAL HENRY H. SIBLEY.

General Henry Hastings Sibley, a Minnesota pioneer and first Governor of the State, died at his ome in St. Paul, Minn., at half-past four o'clock vesterday morning. He had been lingering near the verge of the grave some time and for nearly sixty hours prior to death was unconscious. Death came so quietly that those around his bedside scarcely knew when the end came. General Sibley was born of New England parentage in Detroit, February 20, 1811. After his graduation at the Detroit Academy he studied Latin and Greek for two years, read law two years, and subsequently decided that that profession, which was that of his father, was not his choice. He wished a more active life. In his eighteenth year he became clerk to the sutler at Sault Ste. Marie. In 1829 he took a local agency of John Jacob Astor's ISCO he took a local agency of John Jacob Astor's fur company, and in 1832-3-4 he was the company's agent for the purchase of supplies, a position of great responsibility for a man so young. In the last named year he was admitted as partner in the fur company and was given charge of all the country north of Lake Pepin to the British line and west to the heads of the tributaries of the Missouri River. He took up his headquarters at St. Peter's, now Mendota, which he reached on horseback from Prairie du Chien, a distance of some three hundred miles, and passed but one inhabited house on the way. Two years later he erected at Mendota the first house of stone in what is now Minnesota and which is said to be still standing.

In 1836 he was appointed justice of the peace by Governor Chambers, of lows, and in October, 1848, he was elected a Delegate to Congress from the criensive region known as Wisconsin Territory for the purpose of urging the formation of Minnesota Torritory. He secured a bill for the desired organization, and was the next year again elected as a Delegate, and also in 1850. In 1857 he served as a member of the Territorial Legislature, and on the admission of Minnesota as a State he became its first Governor, being elected as a democrat.

During the Sioux outbreak in Minnesota he commanded the State troops, with the rank of brigadier general, being commissioned by President Lincoln. He was promoted in 1865 to a major generalcy for "efficient and meritorious services," and immediately thereafter was detailed as a member of the commission to deal with the hestile Sioux and other bands of Indians on the Upper Missouri River. In 1871 he was a member of the State Leg-Yaure from St. Paul, to which place he had reved and located some nine years before. fur company, and in 1832-3-4 he was the company's last night at the Amberg Theatre in the shape of a strong but rather ill built rustic melodrama by Ludwig Anzengruber, entitled "Der Meineid-

The play is to a large extent ironic and aimed at ultramontane hypocrisy. But thei plot in itself is clear and moving; the characters to whom it introduces us are firmly drawn; the climaxes are painfully sensational, and the moral "Thou shalt not steal," is brought home to the spectator with great directness.

Mathias, the perjured farmer of the title, is one of the most vivid and terrible figures in the Auzengruber reperiors. He has cheated his niece and nephew, Vrony and Jacob, out of their inheritance. His life is one long lie. He tries to serve both God and Mammon. He is devout as the externals of religion go and interlards his speech with plous phrases. But his soul is black and evil. He has not repented. And when his own son stands before him, the living emblem of remorse, and throws his infamy in his face, he curses him.

The end of Mathias is horrible. He dies wrestling with an imaginary Satanfatter having in a moment of freezy attempted to murder his son.

Amand Kolbe played Mathias with startling force, Max Hofpauer went to the limits of realism in the short but tragic part of Jacob, Amalie Schönchen made much of a minor character, Karl Ernst outdid himself as the old scoundred's son and Kathi Thaller made a charming Vrony. Mathias, the perjured farmer of the title, is one

Mme. Bernhardt tells me she is more than anxious to have an opportunity of acknowledging the kindness and courtesy of the New York stage by appearing at a professional matinée before the end of her present engagement. The profession is quite as anxious to see the great French actress, and if her mauagers would announce the matinée their action would be widely appreciated.

The Music Hall Company of New York, which owns the large music hall at Fifty-seventh street and Seventh avenue, now rapidly nearing completion, is making preparations to open the ball with a music festival consisting of four evening and two afternoon concerts. Peter Tschaikovssky will conduct one or two of the concerts. The soloists engaged include Frau Antonina Mielke, Frau Ritter-Goetze, Herren Dippel, Reichmann and Fischer, Signor Campanini and Miss Clementine De Vere. The Oratorio and Symphony societies will also take part in the concerts.

It was "Wall Street Night" at Proctor's Twentythird Street Theatre last evening. A party of bankers and brokers, numbering nearly two hundred, were present to witness the performance of "Men and Women" and see how the mimic financiers of the play conducted themselves. The meeting of the bank directors and the other scenes were loudly applauded.

Carmencita is making arrangements to visit the large cities next season, and is at present having a tour booked. The daucer intends taking with her an operetta company and several specialists. During the summer she intends to rest.

"Lohengrin" was repeated at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. Herr Dippel, the Lohengrin; Herr Reichmann, the Frederick; Frau Pauline Schöller, the Elsa, and Marie Ritter-Götze, the Ortrud, were called before the curtain at the end of the acts. The applause seemed entirely perfunctory. Indeed, the occupants of the orchestra stalls showed their greatest feeling in hissing the loud talkers in the box.

The large concert hall, including the two tiers of boxes, was completely packed by the members and their friends, among whom were many pretty girls. The entertainment opened with the regulation singing and cracking of more or less modern jokes. "Trouble on the Frontier" was an exceedingly apirited sketch of Indian warfare, acted by G. D., Phillips as General Smiles, W. F. Wall as Old-Man-Afraid-of-his-Breath, G. A. Albro as Rain-on-the-Back-of-his-Neck and E. W. Kemble as Son-of-a-Gun.

Back-of-nis-Nock and E. W. Remois as Son-of-a-Gun.

Part second was opened by a very sweet duet on tither and guitar by Messrs. V. H. Muller and F. M. Crouise. Mr. G. A. Albro and Mr. G. D. Phillips were especially funny as Senorita 'Ohl Terror' and Senorita 'Come-and-Cheat-Her' in their burlesque skirt dancing. The Colored Four Hun-dred—Dr. J. S. Vinson, Mr. George E. JACK ASTOR SEES CLEOPATRA.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD,] Baltimone, Md., Feb. 18, 1891.-John Jacob Baltzimone, Md., Feb. 18, 1891.—John Jacob Astor and his bride spent the day in seeing the sights of the Monumental City. After breakfast at the Hotel Rennert they started out for a quiet walk and in the afternoon took a drive through picturesque Druid Hill Park. In the evening they went to the Lycoum Theatre, and from two seats where they could see without being observed saw Fanny Davenport as Cleopatra. Mr. Astor chatted with callers in the hotel lobby, but the young bride was invisible.

THREE WEDDINGS IN RICHMOND.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE BERALD.]

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 18, 1891 .- There were three rather elaborate weddings here this evening. At the First Baptist Church Miss Eva, the pretty and accomplished daughter of Dr. A.
